Mark 9:38-48

When Jesus' disciples tell him that they saw someone using his name to cast out demons and they tried to stop him because he was not part of their group, Jesus tells them not to worry because someone who does great things in his name cannot be his enemy. He says 'whoever is not against us is for us.' Jesus also tells them that anyone who does something nice for them because they are his followers will be rewarded because of it. But that anyone who causes one of his followers, especially children, to sin, will be severely punished. Jesus warns the disciples to get rid of anything in their lives that causes them to sin. He uses dramatic examples, like cutting off a hand or foot, to show that sometimes the things we need to get out of our lives can seem to be very important and necessary for us.

Jesus' words today can teach us about our friendships. What did he mean by the words 'whoever is not against us is for us'? How are we rewarded (or punished) for the way we treat others? You may have a friend who wants you to do things you know are wrong. What does Jesus say you should do?
